DIVERSITY AND GLOBAL HEALTH PERSPECTIVES FILM SERIES

BENDING THE ARC

Bending the arc is a story of three young people barely out of their teens that began a public health revolution by treating patients who had been abandoned by the health establishment. The community health model they developed to treat diseases like tuberculosis and HIV/AIDS has saved millions of lives in the developing world. Their fight for universal health equity became a global battle in the highest halls of power for the right to health for all.
