Healing by Killing: Medicine After the Holocaust

Presented by:

Sheldon Rubinfeld, MD, FACP, FACE

Fellow, American College of Endocrinology
Clinical Professor, General Medicine
Baylor College of Medicine, Houston, Texas

Ethical challenges in medicine are not simple and often require a great deal of thought to manage appropriately. A solid knowledge of medical ethics and the practical application of clinical ethical reasoning skills are essential components of a physician's skills. This series is designed to develop a greater awareness among the target audience of how to recognize, analyze, and respond to situations with ethical challenges.

Following this activity, the participant should be able to:

- Assess the central role played by the medical profession during the Nazi Third Reich
- Analyze the Nuremberg Doctors' trial and world response to physician behavior during the Third Reich
- Examine the terms, laws, policies as used in Germany and how to trace a straight line from pseudoscience to death camps

Accreditation and Designation:

This activity has been planned and implemented in accordance with the Essential Areas and Policies of the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education through the joint sponsorship of Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center and UMC Health System.
